Commander of Foreign Legion Ordered to Muster Battalions

FRANCE TO BE ON ALERT

Naval Maneuvers to Be Staged in Close Proximity to Spanish Waters

By Lindsey Parrott
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Jan. 9.—(INS).—The commander of the French Foreign Legion at Fez today was instructed to muster his battalions "in readiness for an emergency" as France warned Germany, through the Rebel Spanish Government, that German inroads in Spanish Morocco "would not be tolerated."

Word that Germany has stationed more than 3,000 soldiers in Northwest Africa brought a speedy conference between the French Army and Navy high commands, resulting in a decision not only to place the Foreign Legion on the alert, but to keep French naval maneuvers in mid-January in close proximity to Spanish waters.

Edouard Daladier, French minister for defense, it was announced, will make a "tour of inspection" of French defenses in Morocco starting Jan. 15. Defense experts will accompany him.

"Our whole colonial empire is at stake in Spanish Morocco," the Foreign Office said. "We are ready to take any measures to force foreigners out of Spanish Morocco."

German troops already in Morocco, a note of protest to the rebel Spanish junta of Generissimo Francisco Franco indicated, were sent there to prepare barracks for much larger forces.

Powerful fortifications, according to information here, are being built at Ceuta, making that port a rival to Britain's Gibraltar, across the Straits. These fortifications, it was said, extend far beyond the existing Spanish fortress and include installation of several 155 millimeter guns.

Increased fortification of Ceuta and landing of foreign troops there violate three treaties, Germany was informed by France through Gen. Franco. The treaties are the Franco-British treaty of 1904, recognized by Britain, the Franco-Spanish treaty of 1912, and the treaty of Versailles.

Two thousand Germans, reports said, have disembarked at Ceuta, 600 at Melilla, where the Spanish rebellion first broke out last July, and 600 at Larache, all within the last 10 days. Preparations are being speeded to receive more Germans.

The Reich is also making commercial, industrial and political inroads in Morocco, according to French information. Finances of the Colonial administration have been taken over almost wholly by the Germans, and the Germans are now said to be operating Riflian mines.

HOME ECONOMICS HAD AN ACTIVE YEAR

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 9.—Making her sixth report to an annual meeting of the Bucks County Agricultural Extension Association, Miss Rhonda Armstrong, director of home economics in Bucks county, told 200 men and women attending the 20th annual meeting that her department conducted 473 meetings during 1936.

Miss Armstrong has met with groups of women and girls who requested the assistance of the extension service for the first time. During the past year there have been 13 adult and 17 4-H club groups and in addition to those there were talks or demonstrations given before 11 groups such as parent-teacher associations, granges and women's clubs. Three of the groups of women had never before had extension work. In one section—Fairhill—in Hilltown township, Miss Armstrong held evening meetings because one member was a school teacher and most of the others were factory workers, all employed during the day.

Her meetings in 1936 were listed as follows: Training meetings for local leaders, 4; method demonstration meetings, 378; tours, 3; round-ups and achievement days, 18; other meetings for program planning, 68.

MAKE DRIVE TO BREAK UP ILLEGAL TRAPPING

Number of Arrests Made, Including Several Young Boys; Fines Paid

MOLESTING IS SERIOUS

Illegal trappers, and those molesting and stealing traps, are being tracked down in lower and middle Bucks county.

A drive against such practices is being pushed by deputy game wardens Daniel Potter, Bristol Township; and Joseph Groner, Bensalem Township, as well as other deputy wardens, with the result that a number of arrests have been made within the past three weeks.

Most of the cases thus far have been the minor ones, with hearings ending in imposing of fines; but the deputy wardens are issuing warnings of the serious charge of molesting of traps in any way, this charge not being heard before a justice of the peace, but before the county courts, with the penalty being nothing less than a jail term of from one month to one year.

On one day last week four arrests were made in lower Bucks county on trapping charges, with cases against three minors being heard for disturbing traps; and one Philadelphia man being fined $10 and costs, and his 30 traps being confiscated.

The case against the Philadelphia, Alfred Bernat, was heard before Justice John Gall, Oxford. Bernat had his 30 traps taken from him, and he was sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and costs. The case grew out of a charge of not displaying a trapping license and not having traps properly tagged.

The three minors, young boys from Oakford, were charged by W. Harry Johnson, Hulmeville, with disturbing his traps. This hearing was also held before Justice Gall. The boys admitted their guilt, the arrest being made by Joseph Groner, deputy warden, after Johnson had apprehended one of the trio.

Parents are being warned to impress upon their children the seriousness of the charge of molesting traps in any manner whatsoever, this type of charge being taken directly to the county courts, with the sentence being jail terms. The deputy wardens have had a number of cases wherein the charges have not been pressed, as those making the charges felt the warnings given in some instances through arrests had been sufficient.

Last week two groups of boys in the county were arrested on various charges in regard to illegal trapping. Many fines have been paid within the past few weeks on just such charges, and the deputy wardens state they are in earnest to break up the numerous cases of trap molesting also.

BEAUTIFUL STORY OF WEDGWOOD TOLD HERE

Mrs. J. Bertram Hervey, Philadelphia, Reads Love Story of Sarah and Josiah

CHINA IS DISPLAYED

Served a "banquet" on Wedgwood, with the "menu" of a glorious love story and beautiful pictures garnished with wit and also with wisdom for would-be collectors, Travel Club members left the "banquet hall" yesterday afternoon feeling more than satisfied.

Mrs. J. Bertram Hervey, Philadelphia, chairman of the Industrial and school arts committee of the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs, was the guest speaker who so highly pleased the audience of club-women with her information on the much-valued old pieces of Wedgwood china. Cauliflower-ware and biscuit-ware, as well as that made of basalt; and other rare pieces, were displayed by Mrs. Hervey and other individuals, for the pleasure of the gathering yesterday. Three valuable Wedgwood plates were also shown by the guest speaker, these from the dinner-sets of the King of Siam, the recent Duke of York (now King of England), and the late President, Theodore Roosevelt. The one giving the address explained that such pieces made for royalty cannot be sold to individuals, adding that through kindness of a friend the trio of pieces had been loaned to her for display purposes, and are to be returned.

This visitor, who for 20 years has found pleasure in collecting Wedgwood, stated at the outset of her address that in visiting Bristol she was being educated further in this particular field of rare China pieces. "Bristol is rich in history, and you have some fine pieces here," she informed. The priceless pieces of Wedgwood "which one sees once, and never again," were referred to.

Dividing her part of the program into three sections, Mrs. Hervey read the sweet love story of Sarah and Josiah Wedgwood; showed several slides dealing with their residences, pottery works, various pieces of their China, etc.; then presented for view some of the pieces from her collection, and told interesting details concerning such.

A period of 18 months passed in gathering and preparing the slides, many being taken from old steel engravings. The manner in which the Dutch instructed the English in the art of modelling clay was spoken of, with the art being perfected to a high degree in the British Isles.

The beautiful love story of Sarah and Josiah Wedgwood was read by the one who addressed the gathering, this Continued On Page Four

WHO PAY INCOME TAXES?

Although analysis of income tax statistics for the past year do not show an increase in our rather limited millionaire class, they do show some other significant facts, the most outstanding of which is that a very small percentage of the population is subject to the tax.

It is possible that this fact is largely responsible for the complacency with which large government expenditures are looked upon by the many. The argument has been made, and repeated many times, that the only way by which these expenditures can be made unpopular is to make everyone tax conscious. The only way to do that is to levy a direct tax which will reach practically all the people.

The internal revenue figures on individual income tax returns cover that period of the past year ended August 31. Experience shows that returns during this period are more than 98 per cent of all returns for the year, and cover more than 99 per cent of the tax collected. The few returns filed later are almost all in the highest income brackets. The returns now made public cover incomes in the year 1935. Twelve per cent more people filed returns in 1936 than in 1935. The net income reported was 18 per cent higher, and the total tax collected was 29 per cent higher, with rates the same in the two years.

An income tax return must be filed by every single person with a net income of $1,000 or over, every married person with a net income of $1,500 or over, and every person, married or single, with a gross income of at least $5,000. The number of returns in 1936 was about 4,500,000. This means that in 1935 the above incomes were reported by about 1 in every 28, men, women and children in the United States, and by about 1 in every 13 persons aged 25 or more.

Actually the number receiving such incomes was somewhat higher because certain forms of income are not reportable. Among these are remuneration paid to state and city employees, including teachers; bequests and gifts; stock dividends; interest on tax-exempt securities. Also, some untraceable income may not be reported by certain persons. And about one-half of all returns are joint returns of husband and wife.

The average net income per return in 1936 was $3,276. The average tax was $146. The average rate of tax was about 4 1/2 per cent. In recent years more than one-half of all returns have been non-taxable. That is, the deductions and credits allowed were larger than the net income. So the number of persons who actually are paying an income tax in 1936 is equivalent to about 2 per cent of the entire population and about 3 per cent of the population 25 years of age and older.

More than 89 per cent of all returns in 1936 showed net income of less than $5,000, but this group is paying less than 7 per cent of the entire tax collected. Almost one-half of the entire tax came from persons whose net incomes were somewhere between $10,000 and $100,000. In returns up to August 31, 1936, million-dollar or higher incomes were reported by 41 persons. There were 33 such persons in 1935, and 513 in 1930. Net incomes of $100,000 or over were reported by 2,624 persons up to August 31 of this year, by 1,907 in 1935 and by 14,816 in 1930.

"LUXURY MODEL" by MAY CHRISTIE

SYNOPSIS

On the train, enroute to her home in Los Angeles from college, lovely Elizabeth Harmon meets handsome Gerald Bruton, young stock broker. At luncheon, when Elizabeth compares college to prison, a hard look creeps into Gerald's face, and, later, when a man approaches their table and exclaims, "I never expected to see you in this part of the world!" he turns white. At home, Elizabeth's step-father, Colonel James McCarthy, forbids her to go out with Gerald, so she arranges to meet him clandestinely. Over champagne, at the swanky Miramar, Gerald tells Elizabeth of his love for her. She is deliciously happy and, gazing at the stars, waxes poetical. Had she looked at Gerald at that instant, she would have seen a queer, strained look on his face. Their tete-a-tete is interrupted by the sudden appearance of two friends of Elizabeth, Nancy and Jasper, who are celebrating their engagement. The girls leave the room "to doll up a bit."

CHAPTER IV

Gerald replenished his glass. Jasper thought him a fine fellow and the ace of hospitality. He told him so, hiccuping a little. A thought struck him. Why shouldn't Gerald Bruton and Elizabeth make a go of it too? Wasn't love in the air tonight? To think was to speak. "Say, she's wonderful. Comes of one of the finest and oldest families in the country," he declared with a flourish. "Her father was lieutenant-governor of the state, and her uncle the attorney-general. Now this old bird, the Colonel, who's her stepfather, is retired from the Army but he's got loads of political pull. Elizabeth herself—" his imagination ran away here, because he was feeling so utterly happy and mellow, and because he had an honest wish to "promote Elizabeth's stock with this good egg," and because he felt he loved everybody—"Elizabeth'll come into plenty when she's twenty-one, which'll be soon."

In the cloakroom, Nancy was saying to Elizabeth: "Darling, you and your good-looking beau have simply got to be our witnesses and fly with us to Yuma, Arizona. That's the reason I brought you out here. The idea suddenly hit me at the table. Isn't it too priceless?"

"But—Jasper?—you mean an elopement, Nancy?" Elizabeth was wide-eyed but thrilled. The champagne was in her head as well as in Nancy's. The idea was stunning—fascinating.

"Jasper'll leap at it. You betcha. When I accepted him at the Colony Club he wanted to get a license right away. But it would mean waiting three days under California law before we can legally marry. And who knows, in three days I might meet someone else?"

Elizabeth giggled. Nancy took her by the shoulders and swung her round. Her eyes were like sparkling black diamonds as she sprang her bomb. "Why not be a sport and make it a double ceremony, Elizabeth? You're only young once. He's got money, hasn't he? He acts like a millionaire. And he looks perfectly marvellous! He looks as though he could commit every sin in the decalogue and get away with it beautifully. Devilishly fascinating. If it weren't for Jasper, I'd make a big play for him myself, darling."

Back in the restaurant, however, Nancy either thought better of her plan, or her courage failed.

But it was hatched in Jasper's brain, born of champagne and of his love for Nancy, and of the fact that at half past three in the morning, "Home Sweet Home" was being played by the orchestra, and lights were being dimmed, and one must leave.

"Let's go to the Airport Gardens and have a quick one. The restaurant's open all night," he suggested. There was a light of determination in his eye. Nancy was slippery. Now or never! His mind was made up.

If one could have looked into the minds of the four people who stood before "the marrying judge" at Yuma, Arizona, with the hot wind sweeping over the desert at half past six that morning, one might have been surprised at the diversity of their emotions.

Jasper felt nothing. He had "passed out" in the plane. The last bottle of Gerald's champagne had plunged him in Nirvana. As he stood beside Nancy in what should have been one of the most solemn moments of his life, his head nodded, and she had to prod him frequently and give him his cues, or snore would have taken the place of responses to the marriage ceremony. Nancy was thinking mainly of the photographs of herself that would appear in tomorrow's papers. With the tail of her eye she had spotted a couple of news cameramen as they came in. It was almost like being a movie star. She hoped that the pictures would do her justice. With Gerald Bruton at her side—Gerald slipping the ring borrowed from the judge's wife over the third finger of her left hand—it was as though a great tidal wave of joy were sweeping Elizabeth up mountains. It was the most thrilling moment of her life. Tears intensified the deep blue of her eyes as Gerald kissed her. They were man and wife now. She trembled in the full-

"Why not be a sport and make it a double ceremony, Elizabeth?"

And what of Gerald's thoughts? There was a set look on his face. In the hard, clear light of early morning in the little desert town, the lines on it looked as though graven in bronze.

Only his eyes had life. He was thinking fast. He had just seen the news photographers.

Colonel McCarthy went straight from his argument with Elizabeth to the brokerage house of Edmund Bruton & Company in Los Angeles.

Perhaps he was unduly old-fashioned and cautious, but he felt he was doing the right thing. With a girl as good-looking and headstrong as Elizabeth, one couldn't be too careful. The fellow must certainly be looked into.

That Satan found plenty of mischief for idle hands was one of his favorite mottoes. Work was the thing for her. Work in the home. It would be excellent discipline. Old Martha was getting past her best. The Filipino boy who attended to the orange grove could do the heavy cleaning in the house. Elizabeth—for a time, anyway, until she found her head—should undertake the cooking and the lighter housework.

After transacting a small matter of business with Darrow, an elderly man who had been associated with Bruton & Company for many years, the Colonel, humming and hawing rather nervously, made his inquiry.

Darrow looked startled. And embarrassed too. Indeed it seemed as though he did not wish to say anything.

"Of course this is entirely confidential. Just between the two of us, Darrow. Elizabeth is young and ignorant. Her mother being dead, I have to be extra careful of her. You understand how it is."

Ten minutes later, the Colonel departed, looking like an angry walrus. Darrow had been guarded, as

"Humph! That sort of thing has got to stop!" He stormed out to his orange trees. A spell of work might calm him. He took out his temper on the Filipino boy. Lazy rascal!

When dinner time came, and still no Elizabeth, a suspicion that he had been trying to thrust to the back of his mind pushed itself forward.

Had she dared to defy him and gone out to meet that man? He went in to Martha, asking her if anyone had come to the house in his absence, or if there had been any telephone calls?

"Miss Elizabeth had a call, sir, not long after you went out. She got dressed immediately. She seemed so happy and she looked beautiful, sir."

Old Martha sighed sympathetically and half enviously. She had always been plain. She had never been married, nor had she ever had a beau.

Shortly after dinner, the Colonel told her he was going to the Army Club. He barked: "And when Miss Elizabeth comes in, tell her to call me there immediately."

He became so absorbed in his game of contract at the Club that he forgot his irritation. It was almost eleven o'clock before he realized that there had been no message from his step-daughter.

He would go home. He wouldn't beat about the bush, he would give her his ultimatum.

If she were not there—

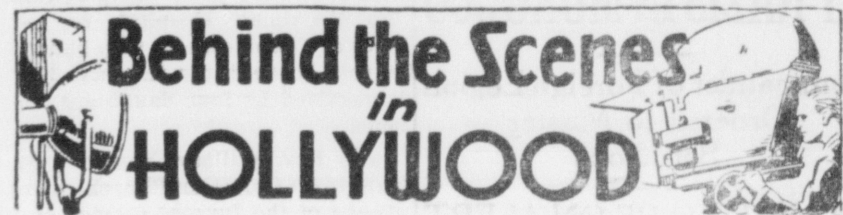

Well... it would be all the worse for her!

She was not there. He waited hour after hour. Irritation gave way to anger... anger to fury.

That spent itself in a recital of the stringent rules of conduct he had formed for her. The Colonel finally slumbered in his chair.

HOLLYWOOD—That surprise birthday party given to Lew Ayres by 25 pals the other night had a touch of Hollywood drama. For the first guest to arrive was Ginger Rogers, Lew's ex. Unlike some divorced couples of filmdom, they don't continue to have dates with each other, but there are no ill feelings. Ask Bill Bakewell, Ralph Bellamy, Florence Lake or anybody at the party.

When Anne Nagel and Ross Alexander eloped to Yuma in September, they didn't have a wedding ring, so used her mother's. On Christmas morning, however, Anne found a ring of her own in her stocking. It is encircled with diamonds, and is properly inscribed.

After two months efforts to get storm scenes on the Pacific coast, M. G. M. recently sent a camera crew to Florida. They hadn't been there a week when the recent gale smashed the west coastline from Alaska to Mexico. Director Victor Fleming, who impatiently awaits the storm stuff for "Captains Courageous", collected pictures of the devastation from local newspapers and air mailed them to his crew in Miami.

"Please get me shots like this," he begged.

You Asked Me and I'm Telling You! Louise Hunt, Glendale: There is nothing new on the marriage rumors concerning Kay Francis and Delmer Daves. Right now, Kay is paying her eighth visit to the Austrian Tyrol. And she writes Hollywood friends she is learning to ski.

An important milliner has called M. G. M. asking for information about Garbo's next picture. The Swedish star, he says, influences American hat styles more than any other Hollywood celebrity. Copies of Greta's Chinese hat in "The Painted Veil" are said to have set sales records. The flat broad-brimmed sailors and bonnets in "Camille" also are to be reflected.

Fred Perry not only has lost his amateur standing but about 400 pounds of cups and trophies won during his early tennis triumphs. When last heard of, they were on the high seas between England and the United States. The net ace hopes they may turn up when the ship strike ends—whenever that may be.

Here and there in Hollywood... The Ralph Rangiers expect that visit from the stork in about a month... The beauty with Wesley Ruggles at the Beverly Brown Derby was Will Francis. She's from New Orleans and she is one of the Paramount contract girls.

The Basil Rathbones are so homesick for Hollywood that they cancelled plans for a New Year's celebration in New York... Did you know that James Gleason goes in for wood-carving? He personally made the hobby horse that went to Frank McHugh's two-year-old son on Christmas...

Margaret Lindsay is so crazy about Hawaii that she is building a permanent vacation home there... Hal Roach celebrates his twenty-third anniversary as a producer. He started out with $850 and, at 47, is one of Hollywood's big shots... The Pittsburgh team was invited to visit Warner Brothers before the Rose Bowl game, but declined. Jock Sutherland still remembers the time when a Pitt team did tour the studios in advance, and was shackled by the University of Southern California. Incidentally, this is one luncheon to which the movie stars look forward. They are keen to meet the footballers as the boys to meet them.

Flash! Latest Hollywood flu victim, Mary Boland, has had to stop work on "Marry the Girl". Bette Davis is so ill she will not return to the studio until after the first of the year.

There still are some ladies who'll put in a day

Crowding to counters and turning away:

Looking at stockings and trying on hats,

Shopping for curtains, for sheets, or for mats—

Gazing at manikins, propped in the aisles,

Standing for hours and walking for miles;

Watching the weather for fear of the wet,

Dreading the dinner they still have to get!

You don't have to do all these things any more—

That's what the stores print advertisements for!

You sit down at home in your favorite chair,

Look through this paper—the bargains are there,

Buy what you need, with the ads as your guides:

Save yourself trouble and money besides!

BUNNIES WIN OPENER, DEFEATING NEWTOWN

(By "Herm" Corn)

Clever, well-executed passing, splendid defensive play and good heads-up basketball in general, helped "Bill" Dougherty's proteges maintain their excellent record by handing an inspired Newtown five a 22-5 setback, on the home court.

Having the best crowd for a long time on the opening game at home, the fighting bunnies were inspired and showed the home folks how the game of basketball should be played. Taking the limelight in this ball-handling affair was Charlie Hughes. He, by making good his under-the-basket shots, was a great asset in this well-earned victory. He was high point-gatherer and chalked up three double-deckers for six points. Van Lenten and Carnvale, sinking each a pair of two-pointers, came next with four points. Smith and Nolan of the visitors each scored a double-decker for the only field goals of the game for the out-of-towners.

In the first few minutes of play the locals managed to draw first blood by victory of a two-pointer sunk by Hughes. Then on receiving the ball on the tap the Red and Gray guards whipped a pass to Carnvale who added another two points to the score. On the next out-of-bounds throw in, a pass was winged to Zefferi who made the ball make a familiar twang sound as it went through the cords of the net. But not to be left too far behind, the Newtown team seemed to wake up and scored a two-pointer. Coming back again, the Bristol team gained possession of the ball out of bounds and when the ball was passed from Profy to Hughes he laid the ball away into the loop, making the score still larger. During the next minutes of play, Huffnell was fouled and was given a charity throw which he made good. Score, 8 to 2.

In order to give the varsity a rest, Coach Dougherty sent in the reserves. This team didn't give their opponents a chance to get accustomed to the change of line-up and immediately Van Lenten racked up two double-deckers and was followed by a single field goal by Vanzant. By gaining the tap-off the visitors worked the ball toward their basket to enable Nolan to score. The score at the half read: Bristol, 15; Newtown, 5.

Coming onto the floor in the third canto, the Bunnies were determined to leave the visitors behind. On receiving a pass from Huffnell, Profy scored a field goal from near the middle of the floor. Then after the ball exchanged hands Zefferi made a shot from under the net, followed by Hughes' retaliation for another two-pointer, making the score 22 to 5. This is the way the score stood for the rest of the game.

The girls last night won their first game of the 1937 season by defeating the Wildwinds, composed of the Alumni, by the score of 20-14.

Debating Shortstop Supremacy

By BURNLEY

When the official big league baseball records are released, arguments always are sure to ensue among rabid baseball fans.

The National League's 1936 fielding averages provoked plenty of debates as to the leading shortstop of the past campaign. The protagonists in this battle of figures and decimals are Rowdy Dick Bartell of the N. Y. Giants and Lippy Leo Durcher of the St. Louis Gas-house Gang. These two boys are both as aggressive as Mussolini's speeches, and they can play shortstop like nobody's business. The question is, which is the better?

Who is the kingpin shortstop of the National League? The record books fail to give a conclusive answer. True, the fielding averages give Durcher a clear and definite margin, with a mark of .971 to the Giant star's .956; but these figures are offset by others in Dick's favor. The rowdy one led the loop in total chances accepted, and also was top man in double plays.

This would indicate that Bartell covers more ground than his rival and is the speedier pivot man, while the flashy Frenchman is the surer ball handler.

Beautiful Story of Wedgwood Told Here

telling of Josiah's years of service in order to secure the fortune required by Sarah's father for the one who should wed the fair Sarah. The great love which the crippled young man bore Sarah deepened with the years, and countless are the pieces of china which show as a background for white figures the blue of the dress she wore when first they met. John Wesley, in visiting the cottage of Wedgwood, found that "His soul is near to God," thus recording in his diary his meeting with the famed potter. Ten years of service in order to win the one of his choice were given by Josiah, and they were blessed with sons and daughters. One of their grandchildren was the famed Charles Darwin.

Josiah Wedgwood was shown to be a man rich in intellect, being practically self-educated, and readily memorizing books which he read. He was described as "a great and generous man." After 29 years of wedded life, Josiah paid the following tribute to his beloved Sarah: "I never had a great plan I did not submit to my wife. . . I worked for her approval." Home Economics Had Active Year home economics, as popularly thought of, has meant cooking and sewing.

"To be able to sew skillfully is no mean accomplishment and yet the aims of clothing projects have been beyond the mere teaching of that work," she said. "Less than half of the adult groups, 40 in number, have taken up clothing projects. These women have learned about the quality of materials with which they worked, how to straighten and handle them, and have been given demonstrations on preparation of material and fitting of the paper pattern before it is placed on the material.

"I am glad to report that 97 clubs of girls have taken clothing projects," she said.

Five groups in the county at the present time are showing a great deal of interest in flower clubs. Another group is interested in kitchen improvement and house furnishing.

There is another side to the picture of extension work, the Bucks County director pointed out. That is the effect it has on the individuals who are active in it. Books and newspaper articles point to the difference between housekeeping and home-making.

"The difference between housekeeping and home-making," Miss Armstrong contended, "is one or relative importance of things material and things spiritual. It seems more important to develop among your young people and all members of our rural families a right attitude toward the dignity of labor and a joy in doing a job or making a correct decision. It seems more important, in short, to consider the effect of the teaching than to make sure a fact is learned."
